MUSEUM EVENT

CARRIAGE SHED UNDERWAY

A fine group of people were present under a rare sunny sky Sunday afternoon for the ceremonies which officially start the building of a Carriage Shed for the Mattapoisett Historical Museum. Mrs. Marland I. Bryant, president of the Historical Society, greeted those present and expressed the thanks of the Society to all those who have worked so hard to make the new building a reality. She introduced Mr. Ralph Staples, pastor of the Friends Meeting House. Mr. Staples led the gathering in prayer as he asked God's blessing upon the undertaking of the building of the Carriage Shed. Mrs. Bryant then introduced Mr. Charles S. Mendell, curator of the Museum. Mr. Mendell spoke of the great accomplishment of the Historical Society in the few years that it has been in being. The importance of the museum as a town asset and its growing importance to the future would be great, he said. If the Historical Society had not been formed and been able to gather in the museum all of the relics of the town's past, those links might have been lost. As it is, they are on display, treasured having been lately stocked. He came each time driving a one-horse wagon similar to the wagons junkmen drive around the streets. After backing down to the water's edge he would wrestle the rowboat off into the water, and having stabled his horse in my mother's barn would row out into the lake and sit for a couple of hours.

"His pretty wife, his only companion on those trips, after watching his preparations, would take a small basket, and, with two small barefooted and dirty faced boys, 5 and 6 years, named George and William Perkins, would roam over my mother's grassland in search for mushrooms. (We most likely collected five or six toadstools for each mushroom). Then she would go and sit under a tree for the time that Stephen Grover was on the water. Just think! No guards, no aids, no friends or hangers on of any kind. Only he and his wife. That was probably the summer of 1895 or 6. I am now at the sunset of a long life, 77 years."

Poodle Tops Popularity Poll

NEW YORK (CFN)—He came, he saw, he conquered—and he remains the dog to beat. That's the amazing story of the Poodle in America today, the dog who dethroned the Beagle in 1960 as our nation's most popular breed.

Doubtless the Beagle, who enjoyed several years of top billing, had a lot going for him. An all-purpose hunter, his coat is easy to care for and he has a compact build and an engaging nature.

The Poodle, on the other hand, is not a hunting dog, though once bred for that purpose. And his coat, clipped as it is in a most distinctive manner, requires elaborate care. Initial cost of the dog also usually ranges higher than that of many other breeds, even at the peak of their popularity.

The desirability of most dogs usually results from publicity of one kind or another, according to authorities at the Purina Pet Care Center. The writings of Albert Payson Terhune and the acting of Lassie boosted the stock of the Collie. Similarly, Rin-Tin-Tin put German Shepherds in the limelight, as did the deeds of many war dogs of that breed.

What Cleo of TV fame did for Basset Hounds was only an echo of the enormous lift given Fox Terriers by Asta, canine star of a series of motion pictures during the Thirties.

Presidents, too, have exercised influence on various breeds. FDR's Fala assisted the reputation of the Scottish Terrier. For a time, the Airedale was much in favor thanks to Laddie Boy, owned by President Harding. LBJ, of course, has helped keep the Beagle popular.

Perhaps the Poodle's popularity stems from the fact that he is the most cosmopolitan of dogs. He thoroughly enjoys city life and makes minimal demands on apartment dwellers. Too, he is an exceptionally intelligent animal.

Whether or not you agree that the poodle's steady popularity is deserved on one score or another, take heart. If you're not absolutely daffy about poodles, there are more than 114 other AKC-recognized breeds to choose from.

STATE GRANGE CELEBRATION

"Plymouth Day", the State Grange celebration of the National Grange Centennial, will be held Saturday, August 26th, at historic Plymouth.

The affair will run from 10 A.M. to 11 P.M. and will include the following: Costumed Grangers, exhibitions by all State Grange committees, Junior Grange drill and prize winning play in the afternoon; Centennial banquet, 5:30 P.M., at Memorial Hall; National Grange Gatekeeper and Rhode Island State Grange Master Woodrow W. Tucker speaker, following welcome to Plymouth by Alan W. Stapleton of Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, and greetings by Frank H. Nelson, Sr., Master of Massachusetts State Grange; Milton L. Fitch, Communications Counsel, National Grange; Harry N. Althouse, National Grange Extension Director; and a representative of Herschel D. Newsum, master of National Grange.

Also, 8:30 P.M. Centennial Pageant, and dancing to 11.

the great mounds of refuse been leveled but fill has been laid on top so that now it is possible to drive in to the dumping area. The Board of Health is asking the residents for cooperation in keeping order there. The cars in the left photo are at the far left edge of the dump site. They are dumping over the edge of the fill into the burning trash. It has been arranged to have a man on duty at the dump to direct people to the proper location. When the man is not there, if people will dump off the edge, into the burning area, the dump can be maintained in good condition. The Board of Health is hoping that cooperation will be such that the dump can be kept open for the convenience of the public at all times as it is now. If not, the area will have to be closed for most of the week and opened only on specified times when a man can be on duty to police it.

job. A bulldozer was on the dump site leveling the area and moving the fill on the top. It took more than one day to do the job so the bulldozer was left on the site overnight. Next morning the contractor found that his machine had been shot deliberately through the radiator and all vital engine parts. This is the kind of mentality which has to be contended with at the dump and other public facilities.

The ills of the dump have been plain for all to see. The road became a valley in the midst of mountains of refuse surrounding it. As the broken glass, nails and other hazardous objects sprinkled into the roadbed, people became disgusted and began to dump even more off the side of the road which of course increased the amount of trash in the road. It was a chain reaction leading to an intolerable condition. Even people who wanted to deposit their trash in the proper area, were afraid to risk their tires in the attempt. Even if they did, it was impossible to determine what the proper area was.

People, seeing this new look, will not want to return to the former chaos. Care in dumping off the edge in the proper place will keep the traveling area free of sharp objects. Proper maintenance will make it possible to reach the dumping sites.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Have you taken a trip to the Mattapoisett Town Dump? Much to your surprise when you get there you have room to turn around. Now, if people will drive toward the REAR to dump their trash, the large sandy bulldozed area should last a long time and make it a "pleasure" to take a trip instead of a "hazard".

Congratulations to the one responsible for cleaning up the dump.

Happy dumping,
Bery Sullivan

APPENDICITIS

Don't treat appendicitis like a simple stomach ache—it could be fatal! Appendicitis usually begins with nausea, vomiting, pain in the pit of the stomach . . . and sometimes fever. Generally, the pain moves down to the lower right side. Whenever you suspect appendicitis, don't take laxatives or enemas. They may cause your appendix to burst and spread infection. Above all, call your physician immediately.

SNAKEBITE

Poisonous snakes pose a dangerous hazard to summertime and fall campers and hikers. Campers and hikers should become acquainted with types of reptiles inhabiting the area and learn their identifying characteristics. If someone in your party is bitten, place him in a prone position. Then tie a tourniquet above the fang marks . . . and loosen it every ten minutes. After that, cut through each fang mark with a sharp blade . . . and draw out the poison with a suction cup or your mouth. If possible, avoid moving the victim and get medical help immediately.

KIDNEY DISEASE

Early detection of kidney disease may save your life. Among early danger signs are burning and frequency of urination . . . discoloration of urine, fever, low back pains, headache, fatigue, and generalized swelling. Prompt medical care of these symptoms frequently can knock out kidney disease before it becomes lethal.

In the way of entertainment, there will be a portrait painter, demonstrations of weaving and the art of making mobiles, and the studio will feature students of the Marion Art Center working with the silk screen, a print-making device. As a special treat, Miss Ayako Miyata, a native of Japan now studying American art at SMTI, has agreed to display a decorative screen from her home and some lovely watercolors and paintings, all originals. She will appear in authentic Japanese costume and will demonstrate the ancient art of origami, that is, paper folding. #### THE TOWN'S MIND by W. R. Bliss, Continued from last week.

Because, said a province law, "bundles of shingles are mark'd for a greater number than what they contain," two skillful men were chosen to see that neighbors did not cheat each other in trading for lumber. Then, there was a town gauger, appointed to gauge and mark all casks of rum and molasses exposed for sale. The necessity for this officer grew out of the "total depravity" of His Majesty's good subjects, in whose casks and hogsheads, said the law of 1718, "there hath been wanting seven or eight gallons and sometimes more which persons are obliged to pay for."

As military service was compulsory upon men between sixteen and sixty years of age, the town had its militia company and members the wardens complained of them to His Majesty's justice of the peace, who inflicted punishment according to law. Gamekeepers were annually chosen, whose duty was to prevent the untimely killing of deer, or hunting them when they were imprisoned in corries by deep snows. The town clerk said in his records that they are "To Bee the men for Prevesation of the Deare for the yeare Insuing."

The office of constable was of high reputation, and, as in old Saxon times, so now, it was intended that only those should have it who were "honest and able men both in body and estate and not of the meaner sort." Every constable, said a Plymouth Colony law, "shall have a Black Staffe tip't with Brasse as a Badge of his office which as he hath opportunity he shall take with him when he goeth to discharge any part of his office." He was therefore popularly known by the irreverent as tipstaff. He gathered the taxes allotted for general expenses of the town, and those allotted for general expenses of the town, and those allotted for support of the minister. The warrant for town meeting was addressed to him by the selectmen. It ran: "In his Majesties name to Require you to notifie the Freeholders and other inhabitants Quallified as the Law Directs to vote in Town Meeting that they meet and assemble themselves together at the meeting House to know the Town's Mind" in regard to the various questions stated in the warrant. establish the authenticity of the meeting; and the constable therein certified that he had notified the inhabitants "by setting up the warrant at the meeting House," by which he meant that he had nailed it upon the principal door of that building, where everybody could read it on Sunday.

No one sought the office of constable, but whoever was elected was required to accept it, or to pay the fine fixed by law for refusing to take the oath. In 1751 a town meeting was adjourned six times to elect men who would consent to take the constable's oath of office, and David Besse was chosen to prosecute "delinquent constables" on behalf of the town. It was necessary for the Town's Mind to be lenient in dealing with this antipathy to the office; therefore the fine imposed upon Benjamin Fearing "for being delinquent in the office of constable" was remitted on condition that he procured a substitute. In 1752 Butler from the debt; but the Town's Mind was unmoved, and in 1755 it directed the clerk to enter upon the book its decision, that it would "not a Bate mr Butler Wing any Part of the money that he gave a note for his Refusing to Sarve in the office of Constable when chosen by the Town in ye year 1752". The sequel of this matter is found in the town treasurer's records of 1756, viz: "I have Reseved a fine paid by Butler Wing for not Sarving Constable in the Town of Wareham 2 pounds 14 Shillings".

Of all the town officers the selectmen were chief. There were three of them chosen annually to direct prudential affairs, holding sessions at the tavern, where they usually sat the day out, having the town clerk at hand to record their orders, served with victuals and grog at the town's cost, To be Cont'd.
